Equestrian Art

The artwork we choose for our homes is very personal. Our spaces can reflect lifestyles and passions. If your passion is horses, no one can offer better images than Bob Tabor. His photos have graced the finest homes in America and Ralph Lauren stores across the country.

Bob Tabor's equestrian work is a stunning juxtaposition of renaissance sculpture and modern graphic sensibility. It is romantic, emotionally intense and technically refined. It is a perfect combination of opposites that result in a breathtaking body of work called "Horse Whisperings."

"The mass of a horse's body becomes a sculpture when it's bathed in natural light. Horses are able to find peace within themselves." Bob Tabor is able to find the individual personality within each horse. He has the ability to wait for the telling moment, to seize the second when two horses nuzzle, or turn their heads just so, or edge into the light revealing every sensuous sinew. He then eliminates every trace of the environment so that nothing distracts from the personality of the horse, and the negative space becomes as important as the subject.

Bob spent most of his life at the top of the advertising world. He honed his graphic sensibility working with the world's best graphic designers and his photographic skills working with the best photographers and directors.

His work is in private collections and galleries worldwide, and he is available for portrait commissions. www.bobtabormimages.com
